Statement of Beth Lamprecht

Good morning. It is sickening that Nathaniel Radimak, after being released from prison early, has appeared to violate his parole by reportedly reoffending in Hawaii, where he allegedly assaulted two women. If this is true, it appears that he remains a dangerous threat. As I stated previously, there was every reason to doubt any chance of reform for this repeat offender. His return to violence underscores that he has not been willing to control his actions. If it is proven that he attacked two women with a baby in the back seat, then I believe that anyone could be his next victim.
