Good morning.

In light of the recent sentencing of Mr. Radimak, I feel that justice has finally been served. For years, there were pleas to keep this dangerous individual from hurting others. While those warnings went unheeded, today we finally have accountability. By delivering a sentence that exceeded the prosecution's request, the judge (thank you) sent a clear message that this continued behavior needs consequences.

This is about more than just accountability. It is about public safety. As much as I want him to serve every day of this sentence, I genuinely hope he receives the treatment he admits he needs during his time served. One day, he will re-enter society. He will be driving on the roads, standing in our grocery lines, and moving through the same spaces as my loved ones and you and your loved ones.

For the first time in a long time, we all can breathe a little easier knowing he will have the time he needs in a space away from the general public. Another thank you to the judge in that case.
