Statement of Kally Wayne

Last year I was shocked to learn that an ex-boyfriend of mine had posted a private sexually explicit video of us on a public web page which could be viewed by anyone, but was primarily viewed by members of the military.

I never agreed to have that video posted or viewed by anyone except my former boyfriend when I was in an intimate relationship with him.

I had reason to believe that my ex-boyfriend posted it. He was a United States Marine at the time it was posted and he still remains in the service of the Marine Corps.

This posting has deeply affected my life. I have received many obscene comments from strangers, many of whom are United States Marines. I have lost sleep, been humiliated and this has also affected my family.

That is why I am now cooperating in an investigation by NCIS.

I am speaking out today because I know that I am not the only one subjected to this type of harassment and invasion of privacy.

I know that there are many other female Marines who have had similar videos or photos posted by male Marines who are seeking to humiliate them, but the victims are afraid to come forward, because they fear the victim shaming and the victim blaming that I have had to suffer.

I want to encourage them to report to NCIS as I have done, so that the perpetrators who have done this to them will be investigated.

We need justice and we want those who have betrayed our trust to be held accountable.
