Statement of Mark Borowski

Within the last week I have not been sleeping well. I have had constant headaches thinking about the release.

I feel sick to my stomach and disturbed because I feel that anyone who raped, tortured and murdered should not be free to walk among people who every day follow the law and help their neighbors and friends in times of need and distress.

Anyone who violates both the moral and criminal law and has no respect for human dignity or life has no right to a place outside of prison or on this earth. My sister's murderer has violated the laws of God and man. This killer's release is a great and painful challenge.

No one should have to endure the thought that the murderer of our dear Lorry Ann will soon be free.
